

DYING FOR THE CAUSE

In the beginning, eternity turned inside out to resolve a disagreement.

Inside out was the first twist of energy.

The twist from positive to negative and back again continues until the circle closes completely in agreement.

The circle opens and closes in the least time.

Time is energy and the energy of the 'least time' is Planck's constant: $6.62607004 \times 10^{-34} \text{ m}^2 \text{ kg/seconds}$ .

The rotating movement is sacrosanct: a divine exchange vibrating the world/universe to existence; such as a common generator except the rotation draws from eternity.

“Draw from it as you will, it never runs dry.” – Tao Te Ching.

...

Cause and effect are one – one with a twist.

Energy accumulates to a mass that overwhelms its parts.

We are lost in our accumulations.

This is the crux.

All as one, we resisted eternity and all as one we continue to resist.

The problem is that we are dissipated into private accumulations that will not acknowledge the higher purpose.

Thought is ‘all as one’ and we are the movement of thought/thinking.

We are the same – with a twist.

Thought is sacrosanct for it is the first resistance; the antithesis of God/eternity.

It is high and above all that it becomes; guiding its own to defend life for its own sake.

It does this at our behest for it is but the sum of our thinking.

All as one.

Thought’s all-seeing eye is the smallest particle that can infiltrate even the least threat to life’s advance.

It sends its minions according to suitability.

No one is immune!

We are fuel for the eternal fire, content, it seems, to die for the cause.

Long live the King!
